Plans for International Organisation

MR. HENRY WALLACE, U.S. Secretary of Commerce, addressing the National Trade Convention yesterday in New York on U.S. foreign trade policy, said that if Britain were to abandon empire preference she must have the necessary financial help to enable her to do so.

The proposed International Trade Conference, to take place next year, "could have for its agenda," he said, "the selective reduction of tariffs, the ultimate elimination of preferences and other trade barriers, and the establishment of an international trade organisation."

"We must make available to those countries which need it the financial strength necessary to permit them to embrace this system, which is not only in our best interests, but in theirs also," Mr. Wallace declared.

"If the United Kingdom is to abandon its system of exchange controls, which canalise and restrict trade; if it is to reduce or eliminate tariff preferences within the British Empire, it must," he added, "have the financial backing to make that possible."

MUST GIVE EVIDENCE

According to Reuter, Mr. Wallace urged the United States to assume "aggressive leadership" in pointing the way to an expanding world trade on a multilateral basis.

"We must give concrete evidence of our willingness to reduce our barriers to trade, and thus promote our own best interests as well as that of other nations. Unless we are successful we may find ourselves engaged in a costly trade war with the Russian group, the sterling group and the dollars' group divided against each other.

"Unless the present trends in the measures of foreign countries to control foreign trade are soon modified, world trade may be strangled by import permit systems, restrictive exchange controls, trade-diverting preferences, discriminatory trading arrangements, and increased import duties.

"In addition, there is likely to be an appreciable increase in the practice by some countries of State trading or State-controlled trading."

U.S. LOAN OFFER

The American Delegation has failed to grant full acceptance to the British counter-proposal to the original United States offer of a $4,000,000,000 loan at two per cent. interest, it was learned authoritatively yesterday in Washington, says Reuter.

At the same time, negotiations have been resumed after the week-end halt, and the British case is being reinforced by a full report to the American Delegation by Mr. Robbins, of the British Cabinet Secretariat, who has just returned from consultations in London.

Both Delegations are understood to be still moving towards a compromise, and there is no question of the American non-acceptance causing a new deadlock at the moment.

British officials again stress that Mr. Attlee is taking no direct part in the negotiations.

Day of National Thanksgiving In U.S.A.

President Truman yesterday proclaimed November 22nd as "a day of national thanksgiving," and published a proclamation requesting the people to "give thanks with the humility of free men, each knowing that it was the might of no one army, but of all together, by which we were saved."

The President stated also: "Many vital and far-reaching decisions await us as we strive for a just and enduring peace. We will not fail if we preserve in our own land and throughout the world that same devotion to the essential freedoms and rights of mankind which sustained us throughout the war and brought us final victory."—(A.P.)

MR. ATTLEE WELL SATISFIED WITH ATOM TALKS

MR. ATTLEE is in a confident frame of mind and well satisfied with the atmosphere in which the "atom" talks opened, Reuter's special correspondent cabled last night from Washington.

The feeling on the first day of detailed discussions by expert advisers on both sides was one of optimism. Mr. Attlee was said to be happy, and getting on well personally with President Truman.

The situation now is that the British, American and Canadian statesmen have completely, but informally, exchanged views and personal outlooks on Mr. Attlee's plan for the internationalisation of all scientific secrets of military significance, and that the advisers on both the British and American sides are working out details separately and producing written documents.

When memoranda are completed, probably to-day, Mr. Attlee and President Truman will meet again to work out a joint agreement in detail as a prelude to the final official communiqué proclaiming Anglo-American policy.

A basis of this agreement is expected to be a final, clear statement by Russia on her security requirements.

SECURITY QUARTERS

Mr. Attlee moved yesterday morning from the White House, where he had been a guest over the week-end, to the British Embassy. Here he settled to conferences with Lord Halifax, British Ambassador, and Sir John Anderson, chairman of the British Advisory Committee on Atomic Energy, aided by a team of advisers.

The conferences were held in a suite of offices newly transformed into a state of military security which had not been seen in the Embassy since the dramatic days of 1940 and 1941. Frosted glass has been substituted for plain windows to conceal the office from over-inquisitive eyes.

A barrier with guards has been set up in the passage outside and a system of passes for callers has been instituted again.

After a breakfast talk with President Truman, Mr. Attlee concentrated on the speech he will deliver to Congress this evening, beginning at 6.30 p.m. (Irish time).

Apart from the vital issue of Atomic Energy, it will be a personal exposition of the policy, doctrine, and outlook of Britain's new Lab. ur régime.

Mr. Attlee is expected to give Americans a frank clarification of the British Government's Socialist policy in his speech, which, says Reuter, will serve as a stiff reply to claims made by a vociferous section of American opinion that Britain, with what they call her "five-year plan" for the extension of wartime emergency powers, is following in the footsteps of Russia towards what some quarters think is undemocratic Communism.

Mr. Attlee still hopes to conclude his mission to Washington this week, and, in that event, he will probably address the Canadian Parliament on Monday. He will spend two days in the Canadian capital and fly back to London immediately.

Strike Wave In U.S.A.

MORE than 275,000 workers in the United States were on strike yesterday.

New York Radio reported that further strikes were threatened in the electrical industry, whose 250,000 workers are claiming 10s. a day rise.

"Many thousands of steel workers are also on the verge of strikes, as the employers have not agreed to their claim for a two-dollar (10s.) rise," the radio added.

"The steel manufacturers are pleading in Washington for permission to increase steel prices before granting any rise in wages.

"In Detroit negotiations are going on to avoid a strike of some 600,000 automobile workers."—(Reuter.)

The Problems of Control

AGREEMENT that the transfer of control over the atom bomb to the Security Council of the United Nations' Organisation, as proposed by Mr. Attlee, is the only ultimate solution of the problem, was expressed by prominent members of the U.S. Congress yesterday, says Reuter's special correspondent in Washington.

Preliminary sampling of Congressional opinion, however, disclosed widespread uncertainty as to when and how guarantees sufficiently ironclad to warrant the transfer of the secret to the Security Council might be obtained.

Disparaging the value of any secrets which any other nation might have, Senator Johnson, a member of the Senate committee on atomic energy and on military affairs, argued that "strengthening the American military establishment would force them to listen better concerning international safeguards against irresponsible use of the atom bomb."

He stated:—"It is my view that it would be better to carry out General Arnold's recommendations for national security first and then follow the lines suggested by the British Prime Minister."

A further strengthening of the United Nations' organisation was stressed—as a pre-condition for the transfer of the secret — by Senator Hart, a retired Admiral, and another member of the Senate Special Committee on Atomic Energy.

Similar emphasis on the retention of the secret between the United States, Britain and Canada, "pending the conclusion of a firm agreement with the nations not now possessing it," was made by members of the House of Representatives.

PALESTINE ARAB PARTY SEEKS SHARE IN CAIRO TALKS

THE Palestine Arab (Husseini) Party has cabled a demand to the Arab League Council for participation in the talks on Palestine now taking place in Cairo, and asking that no decisions on Palestine should be taken without prior consultation with them.

King Farouk, formally opening the Egyptian Parliament yesterday, referred to the Arab League Pact as inaugurating a new era of prosperity, grandeur and expansion in the history of the Arab nations, and added that events in the Levant had proved that force was no argument.

"The same lesson applies to Palestine, where the Zionists had no need to disturb a peaceful nation by seeking to submerge it in order to suppress it," King Farouk said.

The King said that Egypt was more resolved and united than ever to bring about the disappearance of every restriction on her independence by the withdrawal of foreign forces and by the affirmation of unity in the Nile Valley.

"The Government is in contact with the British Government on this subject, and is actively pursuing its task to realise our wishes and achieve the best results," he added.

Mr. Scott, Acting Chief Secretary of the Palestine Government, has asked Arab and Jewish leaders to send delegations to meet Mr. J. V. Shaw, officer administering the Government, to-day. Informed quarters here regard it as likely that a statement may be made to coincide with a House of Commons announcement.

Canadian High Commissioner's New Post

The Canadian High Commissioner to Eire, Mr. John Doherty Kearney, K.C., has been appointed Canadian Minister to Norway, and will take up his new post at Oslo early in the New Year.

Mr. and Mrs. Kearney, who came to Dublin in August, 1941, will leave for Canada in about a week, and will spend some time there before going to Norway.

Mr. Kearney, who succeeded the late Hon. John Hall Kelly as High Commissioner to Eire, had a brilliant legal career in Canada. He was appointed a K.C. in 1931. Before his appointment as High Commissioner to Eire he was senior partner in the Montreal legal firm of Kearney and Duquet.

During his stay in this country, Mr. Kearney did excellent work in fostering trade and diplomatic relations between Eire and Canada.

He has hunted with most of the Irish packs, and was a keen follower of the Ward Union Staghounds.

Problems Facing The I.L.O.

"It would probably be no exaggeration to say that the International Labour Organisation Conference recently held at Paris was one of the most historic, the most momentous and the most interesting of the sessions held since the establishment of the International Labour Organisation," said Mr. J. O'Brien, secretary of the Federation of Employers, and one of the Irish delegates to the I.L.O. Conference, addressing the Rotary Club in the Gresham Hotel, Dublin, yesterday.

Mr. O'Brien gave an outline of the crisis through which the I.L.O. was passing. One of its chief problems was its continued existence after the dissolution of the League of Nations, of which it had been a constituent part; another was its status in the order of the post-war world. A committee was engaged on the revision of its constitution.

Mr. O'Brien said that Paris showed remarkably few traces of the occupation, but prominent industrialists had informed him that there was no prospect of an early solution of the problems arising out of the shortages of food and fuel, and the lack of technicians, which had caused a fall in output at big industrial centres. Representatives from other European nations had told him, nevertheless, that Paris was in a very favourable position, when compared with other cities on the Continent.

EXPORT TRADE OF VITAL IMPORTANCE

ASSURANCE of the Labour Government's concern with the development of export trade was given by Professor Marquand, Secretary of the Department of Overseas Trade, at a luncheon of the Institute of Export, in London yesterday.

"The Government's whole policy," he said, "is based upon the desire to raise the standard of living of the people. It realises that that cannot be done without paying for a large volume of imports. Payment can only be made by exports."

Whatever assistance she might receive from friendly allies, Britain should have to restrict rigidly imports for a long time to come. "Indeed," he declared, "we should look forward to a larger home production of many articles than we attempted before the war, but the major effort to rectify our balance of payments must be with the export trades.

"Britain is not yet ready to deliver the vast volumes of goods which foreign customers would like to purchase, but the process of reconversion is going ahead with an improving pace. An increase of production is our greatest need at present."

After Professor Marquand had left, Capt. Leslie Gamage, President of the Institute, remarked: "I could have wished that he had told us when we are going to get the labour to make the goods we have to sell in the export market. If we leave the thing much longer we shall miss the bus."

Sir Miles Thomas, Vice-Chairman of the Nuffield Organisation, declared that there was £500,000,000 worth of overseas trade waiting for automobiles. He added that Lord Nuffield is going abroad next month to visit South Africa, New Zealand and other countries in connection with future developments.

Heavy Indonesian Casualties in Surabaya

Surabaya was last night almost entirely controlled by General Mansergh's British and Indian troops, stated a Netherlands News Agency report, quoted by Reuter. British casualties have been "very light," an official British statement disclosed, but many Indonesians were killed in fanatical charges against Allied tanks. An unofficial estimate puts the number of Indonesians killed and wounded at 1,500.

According to a British estimate, 20,000 trained Indonesian soldiers and about 100,000 other armed natives are opposing the Allied advance.

Surabaya radio yesterday called on the United States, China and Russia to intervene "in this bloody battle." "The Indonesians have no planes and no air raid shelters," said the broadcaster, according to the Netherlands News Agency. "They have not declared war. They only want freedom, and will continue to fight."

Allied troops advancing into the city are reported to have found the streets littered with goods taken from shops and houses, and Dutch sources stated that retreating Indonesians were looting and wrecking premises.

ATROCITIES

According to a statement by Brigadier Pugh, commanding the 49th Indian Brigade, a convoy of 20 military lorries, which was evacuating Dutch women and children from an outlying area to one of greater safety, was ambushed. The women and children who were not killed took refuge in some empty houses, where they were defended for 48 hours by a small band of Indian drivers and escorting troops.

The Indians were all killed, and the women fell into the hands of the Indonesians.

Two or three survivors brought back an account of the dismemberment of wounded Indian troops while still living, burning of women and children, and the murder, under the most barbaric conditions, of other women and children who fell into the hands of the mob. In one case, the murder of an officer was followed by his dismemberment, his limbs being flung from one person to another by a frenzied mob. The bodies of British and Indian troops, roped together, were found floating down a river.—(The Times, per P.A. Copyright.)

Canada Drops New Tariff Rates

Mr. James Ilsley, Acting Prime Minister, announced in the Canadian House of Commons yesterday that the new tariff rates announced in the Budget will be dropped immediately and the old rates restored.

The Budget included a resolution striking out 29 tariff items and substituting 33 in their place. The tariff increase did not apply to goods from Empire countries, which continued under the free list, but was imposed against imports from all other than Empire countries.

Mr. Churchill Hopes To Visit France Often

Mr. Winston Churchill told Parisians at the Institute of Moral and Political Science yesterday: "I hope that in the years that may be left to me, even when I grow quite old, to come often to France, and bask in her genial sunshine and admire the sparkling beauty of her scenery and landscape. After the awful trials which we have all been through, we cannot expect that everything will go all right immediately." Mr. Churchill was taking his seat for the first time since his election to the academy.—(Reuter.)

New Dublin Trades Union Council

A meeting will be held in Dublin to-night to form a new Dublin Trades' Union Council, to be composed of the nine unions affiliated to the new Congress of Irish Unions, which seceded from the Dublin Trades Council recently. It is expected that in addition to the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, the Dublin Typographical Provident Society, the Bookbinders, and other unions, will join the new body. In the meantime the Dublin Trades Union Council proper will remain in being, and at its next meeting there will be a full discussion regarding its position.

Flying Fortress Crashes At Baldonnel

AN American Flying Fortress crashed into a hedge as it was landing at Baldonnel yesterday afternoon. None of the fourteen on board was injured.

Coming in in a slight fog on ground that was extremely slippery, the pilot found that his brakes would not hold, and he had to make an abnormally long "run," with the result that the plane skidded and somersaulted into the hedge. The plane was so badly damaged that it will not be able to fly again.

Among those on board were two Irish officers returning from a special mission in England, Colonel W. P. Delamere, O.C. Army Air Corps; and Comdt. V. Horgan.

A Civic Guard examining the mechanism of one of the cars which came back on the road yesterday.

FRUIT AND TIMBER TO BE LANDED SOON

COMING from Northern ports as far apart as St. John, New Brunswick, Sundavall in Sweden, and Raumo in Finland, Irish ships are expected to return shortly with substantial shipments of constructional timber, wood pulp and machine parts. Another Irish vessel is on her way from Spain with a big cargo of raisins, while negotiations have been completed for the shipment of oranges from Palestine and Brazil, it is authoritatively learned. Two ships with cargoes aggregating 12,000 tons of oats and 1,800 tons of wheat will dock at Irish ports soon.

While it is still far from satisfactory, the timber position has been eased considerably, and negotiations have recently concluded for the shipment of over 2,000 standards. The Irish Rose will land about 413 standards of Canadian timber in Dublin about November 24th, while the Irish Willow is due to sail in a few days for St. John, New Brunswick, for a full cargo of 700 standards.

The Irish Larch has already loaded wood pulp, plywood and other goods held up at Raumo, Finland, since 1941. She has called also at Sundavall, Sweden, for 1,700 tons of wood pulp, and is now loading at Gothenburg with 208 standards of timber, butter box boards, saws, bolts and nuts, machine parts, blow-lamps, adding machines and ball and roller bearings. She will discharge at Dublin, Cork and Limerick. The Irish Fir has been assigned to load another 200 standards in Sweden, while the Irish Larch will load about 600 standards on her next trip. The Irish Larch's cargo will be the first direct shipment of goods from Scandinavian countries to Eire for a number of years. It is intended to continue the service to Baltic ports.

FRUIT FOR CHRISTMAS

Substantial quantities of oranges from Palestine and Brazil are expected to arrive here around the first week in December, while regular shipments of Jaffa oranges and grape fruit are expected every month up to next March. They will be cheaper than any previous supplies imported during the war. Negotiations are also taking place for the importation of Spanish oranges, it is understood. The m.v. Menapia is at present on passage from Valencia with about 500 tons of raisins, and is due in Dublin about November 21st. Negotiations are still proceeding regarding the shipment of further supplies of dried fruit, which, it is expected, will also be on sale in time for Christmas.

The Sibley Park is on her way to Eire from Montreal with 8,000 tons of oats and 500 tons of wheat, while the Schorharie is on passage from Baltimore with 4,100 tons of oats and 1,300 tons of wheat.

MORE PARAFFIN

Domestic paraffin users, whose ration has been one gallon per month since September, will have it raised to two gallons next month, and it is expected that this ration will be continued in January and February. Provision is also to be made for the needs of country retail shopkeepers, tailors, dressmakers, boot-repairers, and others who have had to carry on without additional supplies for their shops and workrooms. An official announcement on the matter is expected shortly.

Additional supplies of tractor fuel have reached this country, and all reasonable demands for it will now be met. Owners of steam-threshing sets who have experienced difficulty in providing solid fuel and are anxious to change over to kerosene, may now make application for fuel supplies. In addition to these changes, it is expected that paraffin can now be provided for most industrial purposes. The quantities that may be allowed will, however, still be short of normal requirements.

After being suspended since the beginning of 1942, the manufacture of industrial rubber boots is to be resumed shortly, it is learned. Output will be limited until the raw materials supply improves. It is understood that small supplies of rubber hot water bottles will also be available in the near future.

It is learned that the Minister for Industry and Commerce will now receive applications from leather bag manufacturers to export reasonable quantities of their products, provided they can prove that they are continuing to import supplies of raw materials. The volume of exports will be strictly limited for the present.

Dublin Surgeon Tells What He Saw at Belsen

A FIRST-HAND description of the Belsen and other German concentration camps was given to the Dublin University Biological Society last night by Mr. Nigel Kinnear, the well-known Dublin surgeon, who visited Germany recently on behalf of the British Red Cross Society.

Mr. Kinnear, whose talk was illustrated by lantern slides, said at the outset: "I came here to put over a piece of propaganda which is neither pro-British nor anti-German, but if you think it is anti-war I would like that."

Describing one of the camps, he said that it was surrounded by a 12-foot wire fence, with guard posts at frequent intervals raised up about 35 feet, each with a man with machine guns and rifles. The guards were, for the most part, S.S. men, with a number of Hungarians. He had been favourably impressed by the Hungarians, but one could see that S.S. men had been completely dehumanised.

The prisoners lived in huts and in these, which were intended to house 30 or 40 people, there were often up to 600. In no hut was there room for everybody to lie down at the same time. In every hut there might be two or three bunks which were occupied by those who were placed in charge by the Germans. Often those in charge were hardened criminals.

Mr. Kinnear said that for 17,000 people in one camp a doctor was given 300 aspirin as the week's ration. Heating was provided by a small stove.

NO WATER

He said that in area the Belsen camp was about eight-tenths by four-tenths of a mile. There was no water supply, and when the prisoners had to live without water for five days the Germans said that this was due to the bombing of the Hanover waterworks. Built for about 8,000 people, the camp contained 60,000. When the British arrived there were 12,000 women, 28,000 men and 4,000 children. There were 13,000 dead, and 13,000 died during the following ten weeks.

Prisoners were given no clothes, except—if they were lucky—a pair of prison pyjamas. In Dachau the ordinary prison clothing was a suit of cotton pyjamas and clogs, with no underclothes. Punishment consisted of 12 hours' work a day, and one man was kept working in the middle of a stream for a whole day. Their food was 800 calories per day; the allowance necessary to live normally was 3,500. The expectation of life for a man entering Belsen was 12 days.

"The general policy of the Germans," he added, "was to get a man into a concentration camp and treat him in such a way that if he came out he came out an animal. The ordinary methods were not to allow them to wash at all. The ordinary routine day started by having the prisoners stand to attention for periods from three to five hours while German guards counted them and asked their names. If a German was walking along a path they had to get out of the way and bow. They were not called by name; they were always known by their numbers.

ALL EMACIATED

"I did not get to Belsen for three weeks after it had been liberated, and at that time these people were just human beings and nothing more. All the men were about six or seven stone and the women four or five stone—all frightfully emaciated. There were a lot with bed sores and a lot with gangrene. They were covered with lice, and the first job of the British was to get them reasonably clean. The first thing they got was six tons of anti-louse powder, and only for that typhus would have been much more widespread. They all had enteritis. The fact that they were not human was noticeable in their treatment of each other. They would steal anything they could, and do anything in order to look after themselves. A short time after the distribution of clothes began one lady was found with 17 dresses and 12 pairs of boots.

"Cannibalism unquestionably happened frequently, and on one occasion I heard a kid of six saying: 'Daddy used to bring me food to eat off the dead men'—and very often they were not dead."

Mr. Kinnear said that there were 80,000 executions in one camp, and they included 46 Americans in one day. The methods of killing were shooting, hanging, gassing, walking the plank into a quarry, and injection.

Defence Ends

The defence counsel in the Belsen trial finished their summing-up yesterday, says the A.P.

Colonel T. M. Backhouse will sum up the case for the prosecution to-day in an address which may last from four to five hours. He is expected to ask for a verdict of "guilty" on the 45 accused persons.

EUROPE TO-DAY

In Spite of Neutrality Eire Helped Britain

By RANDOLPH CHURCHILL

The views expressed in these articles are Mr. Churchill's own, and do not necessarily represent those of the "Irish Times."

SMALL countries who wish to remain neutral when all the Great Powers are at war have a difficult rôle to play. Pressure is brought on them by both sides, and their life is bound to be uneasy in the extreme. De Valera's neutrality was based on two considerations. It was partly intended as a protest against Partition and a proof to the world of the complete independence of Ireland. Even more, Dev. was animated by a sincere desire to spare his country the horrors of war. Irishmen are not slow to point out that even Great Powers like Russia and the United States remained neutral until they were attacked. They are puzzled that they should be criticised for successfully pursuing a policy to which so many other countries, albeit unsuccessfully, aspired.

At the outset of the war de Valera told the Germans that he did not propose to allow Ireland to be used as a base for Britain to attack Germany, or for Germany to attack Britain. For the rest he intended to interpret Irish neutrality in such a way as best served Irish interests. He made it plain that Irish neutrality was not based on hostility to Great Britain, and his administration has consistently followed a policy of being as friendly and helpful to the Allies as was possible whilst remaining neutral. This did not arise from any love of Britain, but from de Valera's recognition of Ireland's geographical and economic position. Ireland's safety was bound up in Britain's survival.

RADIO BANNED

De Valera's pledge that he would never allow Ireland to be used as a base for attacking Britain was honoured with scrupulous punctilio. The German Legation was forbidden to employ any wireless equipment; and the Irish authorities, provided by the British with direction-finding apparatus, kept a permanent vigil to ensure that these instructions were fulfilled. It was known, however, that a wireless transmitter was in the German Legation, and as D-Day approached the Allied military authorities were alarmed lest a leakage should occur, and lest the German Legation might send out a message which might do irreparable harm to the Allied cause. When the possibility was made plain to de Valera, he forced the Germans to hand over their transmitter, which was safely stored in the vaults of a Dublin bank on Christmas Eve, 1943. The news of this event can scarcely have been the least acceptable Christmas present received that year by General Eisenhower and his staff. The significance of this story is underlined by the fact that the British Representative in Dublin, Sir John Maffey, had three transmitters throughout the war in constant use. He also, of course, had the advantage of direct telephone communication with London.

De Valera's conception of neutrality resulted in widely different treatment of Allied and German airmen who force-landed on Irish territory. All German air crews who landed on Irish soil were immediately interned on the grounds that they had been engaged on operational flights. The proximity of England to Ireland, however, enabled the convenient fiction to be maintained that all British and American airmen, even if bombs were found in their aircraft, had only been out on training flights. This valuable formula enabled many hundreds of British and American airmen to cross the border into Ulster, and so return to England. At a later date, R.A.F. ground crews were allowed to cross the border from Ulster and repair damaged aircraft, which were subsequently flown to England.

Whilst always refusing to allow the Allies the open use of the Treaty ports of Berehaven, Queenstown and Lough Swilly, the de Valera Government allowed the British to station tugs there, which were used for rescuing merchant ships which had been crippled by U-boats. We were also permitted to base motor torpedo-boats on the Treaty ports for the purpose of air sea rescue. These boats were permitted to be armed for their own defence, and, of course, if they met a U-boat, there was nothing to stop them attacking it.

ROUNDING-UP SPIES

The de Valera Government was also most particularly vigilant in rounding up German agents landed by parachute or U-boat. All these agents were closely interrogated and the results of the interrogations at once made available to the British authorities.

De Valera would be the last man to suggest that all this was done out of friendship for Britain. It was based on his view of the true interests of Ireland. Therefore, I have recited the foregoing in no desire to make propaganda for de Valera, but only so as that the true facts of the matter may be known. The fact that we could not use the Treaty ports was a very severe handicap in the Battle of the Atlantic, and a serious menace to British and American shipping. But with this exception, it is probably true to say that Ireland caused much less anxiety in this war than in the last. Nearly as many Irish recruits served in this war in the British Forces as the last time, when a garrison of 60,000 of British troops had to be constantly kept in Ireland to maintain order; and, in spite of their presence, we had the Easter Rebellion of 1916.

Whether de Valera's neutrality served Ireland as well is another question. If de Valera had declared war on Germany in 1942 or '43, he might well to-day be nearer to his goal of a united Ireland. For a declaration of war would have been the one decisive gesture that could have convinced both Ulster and Britain that we had nothing to fear from Irish hostility or neutrality when next we are at war.

British Plans to Compensate All Road Victims

Steps were being taken to secure that where, owing to the absence of effective insurance, a victim could not get compensation from a negligent motorist, he would be able to get it from an insurance association to be set up within six months. This was announced in the House of Commons yesterday by Mr. Barnes, Minister of War Transport, in a written reply to Mr. Woods (Lab.).

Legislation to give effect to a scheme proposed by the Committee on Compulsory Insurance, presided over by Sir Felix Cassel in 1937, would be somewhat complicated, it was stated, but the insurers had made proposals for a voluntary scheme on similar lines. They were entering into agreement with him, said Mr. Barnes, to set up an Insurers' Association as a corporate body, and to keep it supplied with funds. This body would undertake to pay any amount awarded by the courts to a third party, in respect of any liabilities required to be covered by the provisions of the Road Traffic Acts, relating to compulsory insurance, where the judgment was not satisfied.

Dail To Debate Senate Elections

In the Dail to-morrow An Taoiseach, Mr. de Valera, will move that a joint committee of both Houses of the Oireachtas be set up to consider and make recommendations on the method of regulating elections of Senators who are required by the Constitution to be elected from panels of candidates, and the definition of the electorate for such elections. The committee is to consist of Mr. Frank Fahy, Speaker of the Dail, as chairman, seven Senators and fifteen deputies.

An amendment, to be moved by Dr. T. F. O'Higgins (F.G.) and Mr. P. McGilligan (F.G.), will ask that, instead of a Joint Committee, a Commission of nine persons, not more than four of whom shall be members of the Oireachtas, be nominated by the Government after consultation with Opposition leaders to make recommendations for the selection of a Senate.

Alderman P. S. Doyle (F.G.) will move an amendment seeking to have the Joint Committee restricted to five Deputies and seven Senators, without the Speaker as chairman.

Nobel Peace Prize For Mr. Cordell Hull

Mr. Cordell Hull, former United States Secretary of State, has been awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, according to the Norwegian News Agency, and quoted by Reuter. The award is for this year.

Mr. Cordell Hull, who is 74, was appointed U.S. Secretary of State in 1933 and retired in November, 1944, owing to ill-health. He has twice been nominated by South American Republics for the Nobel Peace Prize.

The Nobel Peace Prize is awarded by the Nobel Committee of the Norwegian Parliament "to the person who shall have most or best promoted the fraternity of nations and the abolition or diminution of standing armies, and the formation and extension of Peace Congresses."

Weyland.

Taoiseach's Son As Dail Candidate

The National Executive of Fianna Fail, at their meeting in Dublin last night, selected the Taoiseach's eldest son, Major Vivion de Valera, as candidate for Dublin North-West constituency in the pending by-elections. It also ratified the selection of the following candidates: Ald. R. Moran (Wexford), Mrs. F. H. Crowley (South Kerry), Mr. C. Gilmartin (South Mayo), and Mr. P. J. Shanahan (Clare).

FEW CARS RETURNED TO ROADS

THE change-over from restricted to normal motoring was achieved with unexpected smoothness in Dublin yesterday. Civic Guards who had been drafted to direct a heavier stream of traffic were withdrawn after a short time as the volume did not increase appreciably. Car park attendants, finding their services unwanted, returned to their more lucrative wartime job of maintaining open-air cycle parks. Freshly-painted discs giving parking directions had been re-erected over the week-end, but at no time was the additional traffic in the city centre sufficient to cause congestion even in the narrower streets.

One of the immediate results of the return to unrestricted motoring is the establishment of a "black market" in car starter batteries, but it is understood that an effort to counteract this by the introduction of a price-fixing Order will shortly be made.

Unofficial sources had anticipated quite a big increase in the number of newly taxed cars, but yesterday it was learned that up to Saturday only 6,000 additional applications for basic allowances had been received. Only 640 out of an expected 4,000 owners of commercial goods vehicles registered during the same period. There were 52,000 cars on the road when petrol rationing was introduced. The restrictions laid up all but 7,000 of them.

Garage proprietors are finding increasing difficulty in coping with the rush of orders for repair and overhaul of laid-up vehicles, and many owners have been told that they may have to wait for a considerable time before their cars can be made roadworthy. One good feature of the delay is that the gradual return of cars will give the public an opportunity of adjusting itself to the new traffic conditions.

NO PETROL FOR VISITORS

The Government announced last night that visitors from Britain or Northern Ireland may now bring their motor cars with them, but for the present they cannot be supplied with petrol in this country.

Wet weather marked the resumption of private motoring in Cork. There was an appreciable increase in the numbers of cars out, but traffic remained a long way behind pre-war density. As in Dublin, the Civic Guards in Cork have arranged a series of safety talks in the schools to impress upon children the dangers attendant on careless use of the streets.

Eire Citizens May Claim British Aid

In countries where there was no representative of Eire, citizens of Eire, like other British subjects, were entitled to the help and protection of His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom, and no special fee for those services was made. This was stated by Mr. Noel Baker, British Minister of State, in the course of a reply in the House of Commons yesterday.

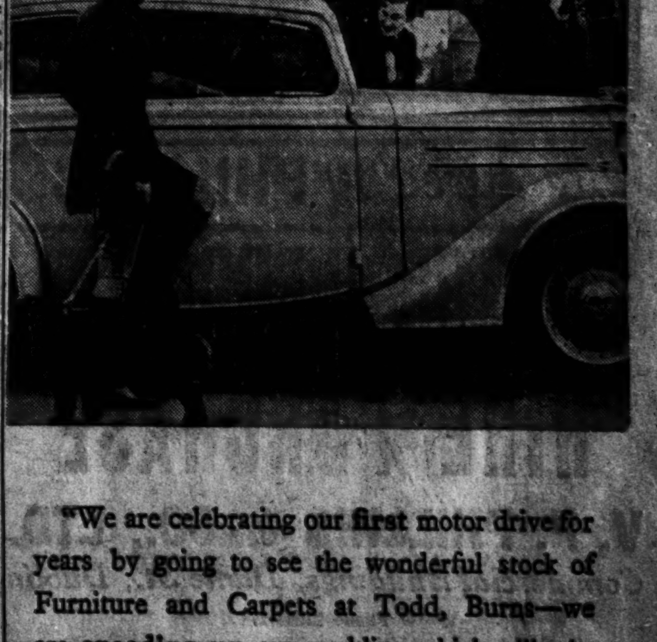

Flight-Lt. Teeling (C.), Brighton, had asked the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs if he would state the number of their Embassies, Legations, Consulates-General, Consulates, Honorary Consulates and Vice-Consulates where there were also diplomatic or Consular officials directly appointed by the Government of Eire, and the number where the British representatives took care of the interests of Eireann citizens, and what financial contribution the Government of Eire made for these services.

King Leopold "Cannot Return To Throne"

The Belgian Government is to publish a White book on the subject of King Leopold next January, M. Spaak, Foreign Minister, announced in the Belgian Chamber of Deputies yesterday.

According to Brussels Radio he said: "We cannot accept a policy of servility and self-humiliation. The King acted in good faith, but his policy failed. He cannot return to the throne and those who advocate his return put the King's interests higher than those of the country."—(Reuter.)

Cruiskeen Lawn

By Myles na gCopaleen

WELL—so Willie O'Dwyer from Bohola, County Mayo, has become Mayor of New York! He had the advantage over his opponents, of course, there's not much difference between the two words if you look at them:—

MAYO
MAYOR

This suggests that it might be quite an idea to change the title of the more remunerative Irish office to 'Lord Mayo of Dublin.' Or just plain Lord Castlebar? (People in such elevated spheres are always open to the ugly suggestion that they feather their own nests. Though the thing has never been proved—in fact the term 'mayor's nest' has come to connote groundless charges!)

Extraordinary people, the Irish! They are fervent xenophobes and if any American dared to suggest that he might fitly be accorded the office of Mayor of Dublin, many voices—presumably including that of Mr. O'Dwyer of New York—would be raised to heaven denouncing such a proposal as an outrage. Ireland for the Irish, people would cry! Keep the dough at home! But see how they covet—and take! —the high offices of other folk. Indeed I am persuaded that the throne of England is not safe from them.

A Memoir of Keats

Chapman once told Keats of the melancholy situation of a friend of his named Lane. Lane, who was a bird fancier, lived on the Isle of Skye and married a lunatic lady named Lorraine, whom he did not scruple to refer to as a 'cow.' Her lunacy, which was due to alcoholism, took the form of loud keening. Mr. Lane had a publican friend, a very pleasant person named Meade, who had old-fashioned drinking-horns; he made many attempts to induce her to do her drinking in Meade's where she would be among friends, but she was adamant in her allegiance to her own publican, whose name was O'Moore, and who had a wastrel partner, an Austrian named Wiedz. Chapman asked Keats whether he thought there was any hope for her, whereupon the poet extemporised the following quatrains:

He shall not hear the bittern cry
In the wild Skye, where he is Lane,
Nor voices of the sweeter birds
Above the wailing of Lorraine.

But when the dark cow leaves O'Moore's
And pastimes poor with greedy Wiedz,
Perhaps he'll hear her low at morn
Lifting her horn' in pleasant Meade's.

Superintendent Explains Action In Killaloe Case

Evidence for the defence was continued on the resumed hearing of the actions against Civic Guard Superintendent Joseph Murray, Ballina, Co. Tipperary, and Sergeant James McGinnis, Killaloe, Co. Clare, before Mr Justice Martin Maguire, in the High Court, Dublin, yesterday, and the hearing was adjourned until to-day.

The actions, which are for damages for alleged malicious prosecution, are by Joseph Long and Henry Oldfield, Killaloe, farmers, and arise out of a complaint about bathing at the pierhead, Killaloe, on August 6th, 1944.

Superintendent Murray gave evidence of having investigated a complaint, alleging nude bathing, and said that Long had told him that he had already made a statement to Guard Hyland. He said he told Long and Oldfield that if they persisted in accusing the six boys pointed out to Guard Hyland of bathing in the nude, they would be guilty of effecting a public mischief. They replied that they would stand by their statements. He felt justified in making the charge against both men, as he had overwhelming evidence that the statements alleged to have been made by them were untruthful. He had the evidence of the six boys and of Charles Elliott. In the District Court Long and Oldfield were acquitted.

The superintendent admitted arresting Long without a warrant. He believed that Guard Hyland had not entered the charges as a result of what Mr. Charles Elliott, Limerick, had told him, and that it was a concoction of Guard Hyland, whom he regarded as a public mischief.

Sergeant James McGinnis, Killaloe, told a report having been made to him by Guard Hyland about a complaint from a man from Limerick in regard to indecent bathing, on August 6th, and of having instructed Guard Hyland to investigate it. Having been shown a report of Guard Hyland, dated August 6th, 1944, and asked had it been altered, Sergeant McGinnis answered: "It has not been altered, but there is an addition of "naked bathing and stripping off" after "indecency."

Mr. Justice Maguire asked him was he sure that the words had not been there when he first saw the report, and he replied that if they had been there he would have dealt with the complaint himself.

Yesterday was observed for the celebration of Armistice Day by the United States, and all markets were closed. The Canadian markets were open.

Flat Dwellers' Quarrel Ends in District Court

For assaulting and causing grievous bodily harm to James Henry, theatrical producer and radio announcer, 29 Clare street, Dublin, Ronald McDonald Douglas, actor manager, living in the same house, was fined £1 by District Justice Molony in Dublin yesterday, and ordered to enter into a bond of £25 to keep the peace for three years. Notice of appeal was given.

The District Justice said he was satisfied that Mr. McDonald Douglas was the aggressor, and that what had happened was due to what was boiling up in his mind. He sympathised with the defendant, and said he was satisfied that there never was any incident in Glasgow.

Mr. Henry stated that about 10.40 p.m. on October 17th last he met Douglas, with Duncan MacDougal, another actor, in the hallway. Douglas asked him for an apology for a statement alleged to have been made by him, but Mr. Henry replied that he had nothing to say. Douglas then gave him two or three short-arm jabs in the ribs. MacDougal said: "Let me get at him," and gave him a glancing blow on the mouth. Douglas then said to MacDougal: "I told you not to mark him, for that is what he wants."

Douglas then said that, while he did not mind any noise caused by his (Henry's) wife and child, who lived overhead, he did object to Henry making noise; and, if he heard another sound after 12 p.m., he would "go up and tear him to pieces." Douglas again demanded an apology, and struck him on the cheek with his clenched fist. Henry replied he had nothing to say, and Douglas slapped his face with an open hand and spat on his face.

Afterwards he (Henry) had to get medical treatment, for his chest was aching.

TROUBLE NOT WANTED

Answering District Justice Molony, Henry said that Douglas asked him to repeat, before a witness, a statement which he was alleged to have made to the effect that Douglas had stabbed a person in Glasgow. What he had said to Douglas was: "You are not in Glasgow now. If you have a complaint to make about me, why not go to the Castle and make it to Chief Superintendent Gantly." He (Henry) did not know Chief Superintendent Gantly, but had received a letter from the Chief Superintendent, with a copy of a letter which MacDonald Douglas had written about him (Henry), in which there were certain allegations. He (Henry) had brought these proceedings not merely because of the hurt caused him, but because of the threat of Douglas to come up to his flat, and he did not want any trouble of that sort.

Dr. Maurice Davin Power and Dr. P. Fitzgerald gave evidence of the injuries received.

Mr. M. H. Ellis said he wished to repudiate the allegation that his client was supposed to have stabbed a man in Glasgow—there was no truth whatevery in that.

Mr. McDonald Douglas said that that "terrible slanderous statement" seemed to have been going round Dublin, and he alleged that it was made by Henry, who had threatened to drag him into court. On the night of October 17th, when he had an independent witness with him, he thought if that filthy slander was made in front of him he would be able to take legal action. When he asked Henry to repeat the allegation, Henry replied: "I have nothing to say." He kept on asking Henry to repeat or withdraw it and apologise, Henry then lifted his knee and MacDougal flung him back. Apart from attempting to ward Henry off, he did not assault him, because he knew exactly what Henry wanted him to do.

Cross-examined by Mr. D. Bell, for the complainant, Douglas said the trouble started because Henry would not go to bed at a reasonable time. Henry's child screamed all day, while he (Douglas) was trying to get through his work. The story started by Henry about him had infiltrated through Dublin, and had become extremely annoying for him.

THE ABBEY THEATRE

Only two new plays, M. J. Molloy's "The Old Road" and Gerard Healy's "Thy Dear Father," have penetrated the neo-Celtic black-out which has gloomed over the Abbey for the past few years. Mr. Healy's play, which was revived last night, veers near to melodrama at times; for, in spite of the fact that the only sight of its be-whiskered villain is in a hideous enlarged photograph which lowers from the back-drop, his pietistic tyranny is projected posthumously, and dominates the lives of the characters and the action of the play, even to the casting-out of one old family retainer and the death of another.

Denis O'Dea, as Jack Dooley, the son who is warped and ultimately broken by the tyrant-father's heritage, acted with fine restraint a part which might have been all too easily overplayed. Siobhan Nic Chionnaith, as his fiancée, brought a breath of normality into the unhealthy airs of the Dooley house, until in its final disintegration she, too, was overwhelmed. The Bridie of Eileen Crowe was a beautiful little study, and May Craig, as the weak and futile mother, dithered convincingly.

K.

OTHER HOUSES

Royal.—The loudest applause at last night's edition of "Confetti" was reserved for a member of the audience, Mrs. K. Finnegan, for her singing during the Double or Nothing competition, again wittily compered by Eddie Byrne. The highlight of the ordinary show was Frank O'Donovan. The Royalettes starred in an ingeniously devised scena illustrating "The Garden Where the Praties Grow," and Noel Purcell figured in a Mrs. Scrubout monologue. Frankie Blowers and Patricia Black sang pleasingly, and there was another Nedser and Nuala sketch.

Olympia.—Many ingredients go to make "Mixed Grill" a delectable offering at the Olympia Theatre. There are songs by Martin Crosbie, June Holmshaw, Dannie O'Connor and Thelma Ramsey, which get the audience going in full chorus. Meta Burns, Belfast child soprano, offers her contributions, and Ike Freedman, a Jewish entertainer, has some lively patter and songs.

Queen's. — Cecil Nash's musical comedy, "Don't Tease Louise," brings the atmosphere of the Canadian backwoods to the stage, with a wealth of scenery and gay costumes. It is rich in music, and was presented with artistry last night. Cecil Nash was outstanding in his "Toreador" song.

Gate.—Christopher Casson plays the part of John Donne in Christine Longford's dramatised autobiography of the seventeenth century poet, which is retained.

Capitol.—The stage show, "Capitol Fare," has as vocalists, Marie Paul, Nick Lewis and Gene Bruce. A novelty musical item is provided by Silvio and his harp. Amusing trick cycling is performed by Will Duffy, and Joe Duffy and Roy Croft supply witty dialogue.

Gaiety.—Rathmines and Rathgar Musical Society opened their second week of Gilbert and Sullivan operas at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, last night.

Rockefeller Institute Director's Visit

Mr. C. N. Leach, Regional Director for Europe of the International Health Division of the Rockefeller Institute arrived in Dublin by air from London yesterday.

Mr. Leach will spend the next two or three days in consultations with Dr. J. A. Deeney, Chief Medical Officer to the Department of Local Government and Public Health, and in visits to Dublin hospitals and Government institutions. He is making a brief survey of public health facilities in Ireland, he said, and he does not intend to go outside the city during his stay.

ANOTHER SIX MONTHS

Having pleaded guilty to a number of counts of housebreaking and larceny, Bernard Joseph Brandell (22), Lower Kimmage road, was, in the Dublin Circuit Criminal Court, yesterday, sent to prison for six months, to be served at the end of his unexpired sentence of three years' penal servitude.

Ireland's Rugby Strength On View

By P. D. MacWEENEY

REPRESENTATIVE Rugby teams are flowing in from all parts of the country, and one can see at a glance the whole of Ireland's resources for the forthcoming international matches. We should be all right for forwards; Con Murphy's form leaves the full-back job in capable hands; E. O'Mullane, who shaped well until he was injured against the British Army in Belfast last February, is developing satisfactorily as a scrum-half, according to those who saw him at Castle avenue on Saturday, so the three-quarters and the out-half are the knotty problems for the selectors.

At the moment, J. W. Kyle, of Queen's University, is the main hope at out-half, and he will have his first real test against the New Zealanders to-morrow. With F. G. Moran, J. A. Todd and P. Reid to choose from, we have reasonable resources on the wings. B. Quinn, too, is likely to be well in the running. He may not be especially fast, but his clever positioning reminds me of E. J. Lightfoot, who played many an excellent game for Ireland between 1931 and 1933.

SHORTAGE OF CENTRES

We are poorly equipped with centre three-quarters. K. Quinn will, I think, prove himself worthy of a place in the big games, but he seems to be liable to injury, and, on the four inter-provincial teams, where is there another in the front rank? Munster have chosen a newcomer in B. O'Hanlon against Ulster on Saturday, and he may be a "discovery." His partner, M. Curtin, played a most brilliant game on his first appearance for Munster, and was largely responsible for their win over Leinster in Limerick three years ago; but he has not reproduced the same form since. Neither Greer nor Monteith are likely to come under consideration for the Irish XV.

VALUABLE TRIAL

The Irish selectors will have a most valuable trial fixture in the match against the British Army at Ravenhill on December 15th. This will be the fifth and last of the war-time series, which was of immense value to the game in this country. Let us hope that on this occasion no regional considerations will enter into the selection of the team—it should be the one most likely to oppose France at Lansdowne road in January.

ENGLAND'S SELECTION

The following England XV has been selected to meet the New Zealand Army at Twickenham on Saturday week:—

Full-back—H. Pateman (Coventry).

Three-quarters—G. Hollis (Hull and East Riding), E. K. Scott (St. Mary's Hospital), J. Heaton (Waterloo) (capt.), D. L. Marriott (Old Blues).

Half-backs—N. M. Hall (St. Mary's Hospital), P. W. Sykes (Wasps).

Forwards—T. Price (Gloucester), W. O. Chadwick (Richmond), G. A. Kelly (Bedford), D. B. Vaughan (Harlequins), J. Mycock (Sale), G. Hudson (Gloucester), H. F. Wheatley (Coventry), E. Bole (Cambridge U.).

The majority of these players have had experience of Services' international matches, but only two, Heaton and Wheatley, have played for their country in the pre-war series. To Irish Rugby followers, there are very few familiar names, for not one of the fifteen played on the four British Army teams which met Ireland in Belfast during the war.

NEW ZEALAND TEAM FOR BELFAST

L. H. Grant, the South Canterbury forward chosen to take the place of O. J. MacLean, injured in the opening fixture at Swansea, gets his first game for the New Zealand Army touring team when they meet Ulster at Belfast to-morrow.

The team, which shows ten changes from that successful over Northern Services at Leeds, is:—H. E. Cook (Hawkes Bay); W. A. Meates (Canterbury), J. C. Kearney (Otago), J. Sherratt (Wellington), I. Proctor (N. Auckland); A. N. King (Wellington), W. S. Edwards (Auckland); J. Finlay (capt.) (Manawatu), D. S. Bell (Hawkes Bay), F. N. Haigh (Wellington), N. J. MacPhail (Canterbury), A. W. Blake (Wairarapa), L. H. Grant (S. Canterbury), S. W. Woolley (Marlborough), N. H. Thornton (Auckland).

Ulster have made two changes. R. L. Logan (Waterloo) cannot travel, and J. A. Todd (Instonians) is injured. Their places will be taken by C. Finch (North of Ireland), and G. A. Mitchell (Dublin University).

GOFF'S NOVEMBER SALES

Messrs. Goff's November sales begin at Ballsbridge at half-past nine this morning. They will last for four days, and in the course of that time 717 lots are due to come under the hammer. These lots vary exceedingly. To-day a contingent of well-known horses in training and a number of yearlings will pass through the ring; the second day is given up entirely to an interesting collection of mares and foals; while very many untried young horses, prospective 'chasers, hunters, and one or two horses in training fill the stage on Thursday and Friday.

FOOTBALL STRIKE OFF

Accepting an immediate increase of £1 per week in the weekly wage of £8 for full-time players, and the match fee of £4 for others, representatives of the Players' Union called off their strike threat, following their meeting with the Football League Management Committee at Manchester yesterday.

A surprise concession to the players will be the restoration of pre-war match bonuses, which are £2 for a win and £1 for a draw in League matches, and anything from £2 in the first round to £12 in the final for F.A. Cup games. There is divided opinion among the clubs on the merits of the bonus system. The new rates apply for the rest of this season. Next season's agreements will be discussed later in the season, when the League and Union meet again.

GATE MONEY TO HELP REBUILD STALINGRAD

Re-building of the ruins of Stalingrad will be helped by the soccer "match of the century" between Chelsea F.C. and the Russian team, Moscow Dynamo F.C., at Stamford Bridge, London, to-day. The gate, judged by the frantic rush for tickets yesterday, may approach Chelsea's ground record of 83,000. The Russians' share of receipts will, like that from other matches they play, go to the Football Association, who will have the money directed to the charitable objects chosen by the tourists. The Stalingrad Fund is high on the list.

The Right Hon. A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, who is a vice-president of Chelsea F.C., will shake hands with the teams before the match is due to start. The Soviet Ambassador is expected to be among other distinguished guests. Enquiries for tickets have been received from sports enthusiasts of almost every nationality. The Russians, who will play under British Rules, are to be entertained by Chelsea at a reception after the game.

Good Coursing In Spite Of Adverse Conditions

By MASTER M'GRATH

HANDICAPPED by most of the game being on foot, a heavy downpour that lasted well into the afternoon, and several of their peace-time coursing fields being under tillage, the Donabate club yesterday did extremely well to get through 27 courses. At one stage long divisions looked a more likely ending, for officials and beaters were soaked through, but, helped by a welcome change in the weather in the evening, they were able to reach the last round of the puppies and the Kilcrea Stake, and run out the Portrane Stakes.

It was very good coursing, a strange feature of which was that, of the 32 slipped, 26 were bitches, there being two dogs only in each stake. We had many rousing trials, particularly in the second-last beat off Mr. Collins's land, which provided some stags of hares.

A division was resulted in the Donabate Stake between Mr. Michael Sherlock's Island Meadow and Mr. Dominic O'Dea's Negro's Bark. Both showed good puppy pace, and handled the strong hares very smartly; indeed, on the whole, it proved a really good stake.

Mrs. Mary King-French's Jungle Frill and Mr. James Fallon's Forty Buttons, dividers of the Kilcrea Stakes, also displayed much greyhound merit; and a popular win was that of Mr. Robert Craigie's Harristown Dinky in the Portrane Stake. She, too, went a merry bat in her three courses.

DONABATE STAKES (16 puppies).—Darby Lad (2l.) beat Lovely Lucan; Island Meadow (just up) beat Southcote Beauty; Walk Alone (2l.) beat My Little Girlie; Galmy Pride (very strong favour) beat Trovatore; Bright Record (4l.) beat Rebel Bloom; Negro's Bark declared winner, Queen's Champion disqualified for not coursing; Monk's Mead beat Tossy (unsighted); Anne Pidgeon (3l.) beat Corr's Pet. Second Round—Island Meadow (1l.) beat Darby Lad; Walk Alone (4l.) beat Galmy Pride; Negro's Bark (1l.) beat Bright Record; Monk's Mead (2l.) beat Anne Pidgeon. Third Round—Island Meadow (just up) beat Walk Alone; Negro's Bark (2l.) beat Monk's Mead.

Mr. M. Sherlock's f. b. Island Meadow (Heath Clad—Mae Meadow) and Mr. D. O'Dea's bd. b. Negro's Bark (Carnagh Moor—Negro's Fire) divided.

KILCREA STAKE (8 all ages—2-course).—Mr. Jas. Fallon's r. f. b. Forty Buttons (Lawless Bob—Dashing Nancy) and Mrs. M. King-French's bd. b. Jungle Frill (Cardinal Puff—Quintin Lady) divided.

PORTRANE STAKES (8 all ages—1-course)—Deciding Course—Mr. Robert Craigie's f. b. Harristown Dinky (Printer—Harristown Nell) beat Mrs. K. Sheridan's bd. b. Cherry Bud (Ruby Border—Rozzer's Bud).

REDMOND WINS IN STRAIGHT FRAMES

Potting with extreme accuracy throughout, J. Redmond (Dublin) beat J. Lenzi (Belfast) in straight frames in the second round of the Irish snooker championship at O'Connell Hall last night on scores 94-17, 59-30, 76-26.

In the first frame Redmond put up the highest break of the championship to date when, with 3 blacks, pink, blue and green, he ran up 40.

In the second match C. Downey (Belfast) beat D. Marron (Dublin) by 3 frames to 1 on scores of 51-54, 77-12, 61-40, 58-52.

Although producing no large breaks, Downey was very consistent. Marron had an excellent opportunity of taking the fourth frame, but he under-hit the pink to leave it on the lip of the pocket.

LOCAL "GILTS" AGAIN BRIGHT

MARKETS started off the week on the Dublin Stock Exchange with a fairly busy appearance. Local securities claimed a fair measure of attention. The tendency among British Industrials was rather easier.

Irish Gilt-edged issues were again to the fore, and fresh support put prices higher in most cases. Limerick 3½ p.c. advanced to 102½, and Dublin 3½ p.c. 1963/83 jumped 30/- to 104½. Banks were busier than of late, and Bank of Ireland stock, on keen demand, strengthened two points to 366. Caimes Ord. came in sellers, and reacted 9d. to 21/9.

Quieter conditions prevailed in the Transport group. Coras Iompair Common eased to 77¼; Gt. Northern Ord. and Guar. held steady, and the Pref. hardened to 50. Alliance Gas Ord. were freely offered all day, and closed 9d. down at 25/6.

In Draperies, Pim Bros. issues inclined easier, but other issues held up well. Cement Deb. firmed up to 111¼. Goulding Ord. at 34/6, and Goodbody Ord. at 42/-, were both pence higher. Stephen's Green Cinema Pref. made headway to 19/6.

Tobaccos were dull, and B.A.T. Ord. drooped to 125/3, and Imperial Tobaccos eased to 160/9. Courtaulds Ord. declined to 57/3, but Gt. Universal Stores were raised further to 34/10½. Shell Transport Ord. rose to 84/6, and Vickers Ord. quoted 19/7½.

U.S. Interest in E.M.I.

The sudden interest shown by American investors in the 10s. shares of Electrical and Musical Industries, Ltd., may have something to do with the forthcoming annual report and accounts, in which the chairman may have something to say regarding the future of the company. It is known that gross profit in the year to June 30th last showed a considerable increase, for, although the net profit hardly varied from the previous year at £150,085, against £149,250, this was after deducting a larger amount for taxation at £1,043,844, against £895,267.

It was made clear by the chairman at the last annual meeting that the company is prepared to play a large part in the expansion and development of radio and television once it is finally released from the obligations of war work on which 96 per cent. of the efforts of the operating companies have been devoted during the war years.

The distribution on the £2,902,874 of Ordinary capital has again been limited to 8 per cent. for the past year on the basis of which the return is little over 2¾ per cent. on the present price of the shares. It is thus evident that present buying of the shares is based on prospects.

The problems arising from the transition from war to peace operations has compelled William Neill and Co. (St. Helens), Ltd., general engineers, to conserve its resources.

This is the explanation given by the directors of the cut in the dividend, recently announced, from 5d. per 2/- share to 3½d.

Profits in the year to March 31st last were well maintained at £66,487, against £67,501; but some doubts exist regarding the current year, and it has been announced that no interim dividend will be distributed. The company's 2/- shares are quoted around 5/-.

Minton Hollins, Ltd., manufacturers of wall and floor tiles, is paying one-and-a-half years' arrears of Preference dividend, bringing payment up to February, 1942.

Profits fell from £10,356 to £3,845, but in the previous year a debit balance of £8,038 was wiped out, and one year's arrears of Preference dividend was paid.

The company has been affected by the fact that it came within the compensation scheme, and its revenue has come from compensation received under that scheme.

CABLES RISE FURTHER: "EMMIES" JUMP 2/6

FROM OUR LONDON FINANCIAL CORRESPONDENT

ALTHOUGH there was a tendency in some quarters yesterday to await further developments, there was considerable interest in certain specialities, which displayed a very fair amount of activity for special reasons. There was a large turnover in Cable issues, on a leading firm of brokers' summing up of favourable possibilities; and, although closing under the best points, registered further substantial improvements on the day, with the Ordinary 3½ points higher at 110, and the Preference 4 points at 114. "Emmies" were a strong market, under American influence, and the Ord. rose 2/6 to 34/4½.

Leading Gilt-edged stocks left off with a slightly easier trend. European Loans closed dull, especially the German Potash Loans; but T. Dawes Bonds hardened. Home Rails were neglected.

Dowty Equipment put on another 4½d. to 12/4½, on the expected developments. Rayons and Cement issues showed firmness, but Motor shares were dull. Silentbloc were wanted, and, after rising to 13/1½, fell back and left off unaltered. J. Stone changed hands around 106/6. Banks were a few pence better, while Insurance shares also showed some improvement; but Prudential "A" gave way ½ to 27½. On the other hand, Cinema shares were reactionary. Odeons lost 1/-, and A.B. Pictures over 1/-, on a newspaper review of their position. In the Shipping group, Indo-China Defd. fell back 1 1/16 to 14½ on the interim statement. Eastwoods closed a firm market at 45/6, as also Radio Rentals 1½. Swan Hunter and Bolsover improved several pence. Tea shares were firmer. Internationals were inactive, Wall street being closed.

Rubbers showed no decided trend. Oils were on the dull side, with Attocks weak at 60/7½, with business done at 60/- following the annual report. Shells and Anglo-Iranians lost 1/16, and Royal Dutch were marked down ½ point to 34. Anglo-Egyptian "B" and Trinidad Development, on the other hand, hardened 1/16.

Kaffirs were quiet, and showed little change on the day, but Simmer and Jack lost 6d. at 14/- on the pressure burst, and Modder East receded ¼ to 3½ following an engineer's unfavourable report. African and European moved up 1/16 to 6½. In other directions, Burma Corporation opened strong at 17/10½ on American buying, but gave way later, and closed only 6d. better at 16/6. Trepca and Fresnillo improved 6d., but Mt. Lyell reacted 1/16 to 17/6 on the news of no dividend against 7½ p.c.

two dogs only in each stake. We had many rousing trials, particularly in the second-last beat off Mr. Collins's land, which provided some stags of hares.

A division was resulted in the Donabate Stake between Mr. Michael Sherlock's Island Meadow and Mr. Dominic O'Dea's Negro's Bark. Both showed good puppy pace, and handled the strong hares very smartly; indeed, on the whole, it proved a really good stake.

Mrs. Mary King-French's Jungle Frill and Mr. James Fallon's Forty Buttons, dividers of the Kilcrea Stakes, also displayed much greyhound merit; and a popular win was that of Mr. Robert Craigie's Harristown Dinky in the Portrane Stake. She, too, went a merry bat in her three courses.

DONABATE STAKES (16 puppies).
Darby Lad (2l.) beat Lovely Lucan; Island Meadow (just up) beat Southoote Beauty; Walk Alone (2l.) beat My Little Girlie; Galmy Pride (very strong favour) beat Trovatore; Bright Record (4l.) beat Rebel Bloom; Negro's Bark declared winner, Queen's Champion disqualified for not coursing; Monk's Mead beat Tossy (unsighted); Anne Pidgeon (3l.) beat Corr's Pet.
Second Round—Island Meadow (1l.) beat Darby Lad; Walk Alone (4l.) beat Galmy Pride; Negro's Bark (1l.) beat Bright Record; Monk's Mead (2l.) beat Anne Pidgeon.
Third Round—Island Meadow (just up) beat Walk Alone; Negro's Bark (2l.) beat Monk's Mead.
Mr. M. Sherlock's f. b. Island Meadow (Heath Clad—Mae Meadow) and Mr. D. O'Dea's bd. b. Negro's Bark (Carnagh Moon—Negro's Fire) divided.

KILCREA STAKE (8 all ages—2-course)—Mr. Jas. Fallon's r. f. b. Forty Buttons (Lawless Bob—Dashing Nancy) and Mrs. M. King-French's bd. b. Jungle Frill (Cardinal Puff—Quintin Lady) divided.

PORTRANE STAKES (8 all ages—1-course)—Deciding Course—Mr. Robert Craigie's f. b. Harristown Dinky (Printer—Harristown Nell) beat Mrs. K. Sheridan's bd. b. Cherry Bud (Ruby Border—Rozzer's Bud).

REDMOND WINS IN STRAIGHT FRAMES

Potting with extreme accuracy throughout, J. Redmond (Dublin) beat J. Lenzi (Belfast) in straight frames in the second round of the Irish snooker championship at O'Connell Hall last night on scores 94-17, 59-30, 76-26.

In the first frame Redmond put up the highest break of the championship to date when, with 3 blacks, pink, blue and green, he ran up 40.

In the second match C. Downey (Belfast) beat D. Marron (Dublin) by 3 frames to 1 on scores of 51-54, 77-12, 61-40, 58-52.

Although producing no large breaks, Downey was very consistent. Marron had an excellent opportunity of taking the fourth frame, but he under-hit the pink to leave it on the lip of the pocket.

EX-SCHOOLBOY CHAMPION PLAYS JOE DAVIS

John Barrie, of Wisbech, tall, fair-haired former schoolboy champion, began his first big billiards and snooker games at Burroughes' Hall, London, yesterday, when he opposed champion Joe Davis in a three-day match. He is receiving 1,200 points start in a billiards match of 3,000 up, and 28 points in each of 25 frames of snooker. At the close of play, scores in the billiards were: Davis (in play), 1,004; Barrie, 1,444. Davis had breaks of 315 (unfinished), 191 and 79. Barrie's highest was 90.

Davis won four of the six frames of snooker, in which he had a break of 62.

TARA HARRIERS

The opening meet took place at Bellinter. No change has taken place this season, the joint masters still being J. Briscoe, H. E. Massy and Senator Quirke. R. Casey, Hon. Whip. A large field enjoyed a good day's sport. Amongst those out were J. Briscoe, M.H.; Senator Quirke, M.H.; Mr. and Mrs. C. Briscoe, Miss Stella Briscoe, Rev. Dr. Dunne, Rev. Fr. Holloway, Dr. Monaghan, Capt. and Mrs. D. Bagalley, Mrs. Bagalley, Major McCarthy, Major O'Kelly, Mrs. and Miss Spicer, Mrs. Dorgan, Mrs. J. McEntaggert, Mr. and Miss Finegan, L. Maguire, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lynch, Miss O'Brien, Dr. and Mrs. White.

E. C. Taylor will be riding mainly at the Northern meetings this season. He goes to Southwell at the week-end, where two of his mounts will be Coastal Command and Rud-

OBITUARY

MR. ALFRED E. TAYLOR

The death occurred in Edinburgh on October 31st, at the age of seventy-five, of Alfred Edward Taylor, M.A., D.Litt., LL.D., F.B.A., Professor Emeritus of Moral Philosophy in Edinburgh University.

A well-known writer on philosophical and classical subjects, and one of the most eminent authorities on Plato, Dr. Taylor was the son of the Rev. A. Taylor, of Oundle. He was educated at Kingswood School, Bath, and Oxford. He was elected a Fellow of Merton College, Oxford, in 1891. From 1896 to 1903 he was Lecturer in Greek and Philosophy at Owens College, Manchester. In 1903 he became Professor of Philosophy at McGill University, Montreal, and from there, five years later, he went to St. Andrews as Professor of Moral Philosophy. In 1924 he was appointed to the chair of moral philosophy in Edinburgh University, and in 1941 was made Professor Emeritus.

His best known publications are his "Elements of Metaphysics," "Plato, the Man and his Work," and his commentaries on the Timoeus and Plato's Laws. In 1939 he wrote an essay entitled "Does God Exist?" to demonstrate that it is unbelief, not belief, that is the unreasonable attitude. Publication was delayed, but the book is announced for publication this month.

Dr. Taylor is survived by his son, F. E. A. Taylor, of the Indian Civil Service, and his grandson, Patrick J. Taylor, of the Vicarage, Finglas.

MR. JAMES C. C. BEST

The death of Mr. James Cecil Corbett Best, B.A., B.A.I., engineer of the Irish Shell Company, took place on Sunday morning. He was educated at the Royal School, Armagh, and entered Dublin University in 1914. He interrupted his studies in the following year to join the British Army.

He qualified in 1922, and joined the staff of Messrs. Grainger Bros., road constructors. In 1929 he went to Irish Shell. During the war he worked on Government aerodrome construction in Britain. While there he became ill, and in July last he returned to Dublin. He is survived by his widow and young son.

TEST-CASE FOR ASIA

The situation in Indonesia, where a "bloody battle" still is raging for possession of Sourabaya, represents a most lamentable conflict of unwilling enemies. British and Indian troops, equipped with artillery and aircraft, are waging war against nationalist forces believed to include 100,000 armed men. Probably as many as 1,500 Indonesians—many of them non-combatants—have been killed or wounded, and, while British casualties have been described as light, it is fairly certain that before a solution is reached many British soldiers will have given their lives, like the unfortunate General Mallaby, in a conflict which really is none of their business. The British do not want to fight the Indonesians. The fact is clear enough from the tone of newspaper comment, if from nothing else. Their objects in entering Java were to disarm the Japanese and to secure the safety of internees. So far they have disarmed less than 1,000 Japanese troops, and it is quite clear that the bulk of the Japanese arms in the island have been surrendered, voluntarily or otherwise, to the militant nationalists. As for the internees, some progress has been made with their evacuation, but many remain, and their safety is by no means assured. In order to secure their two objects, however, and also, perhaps, as a gesture of friendship to another Western European people, the British have been involved in what is known as "maintaining order"—in other words, taking charge of the administration of the island in order to hand it over to the Dutch, who have not sufficient forces or supplies of their own on the spot. The Indonesian nationalists do not want to fight the British—or, at least, Dr. Soekarno, President of the self-styled Indonesian Republic, does not want to fight the British. On the other hand, they are determined to resist the restoration of Dutch sovereignty over their country; and, therefore, they are bound to resist the British, without whose aid the Dutch cannot hope to re-establish control. Obviously, the situation is one which can be resolved only by calm consideration and compromise; equally obviously, it is drifting daily to wilder and more bloody conflict. If hostility between the British and the Indonesians was not the cause of the fighting, it is almost certain to be the result.

To oppose the full might of British arms manifestly would be impossible for the Indonesian forces. They might maintain, however, a damaging and long-drawn-out guerrilla campaign, long after an apparent defeat in the field. What is more important, from the British point of view, is that every day's armed opposition to a nationalist movement which has its sympathisers all over Asia—and, indeed, in America, Europe and Australia also—tends to disillusionise those who believed that the lion had changed his spots. Great Britain wishes to discard a tradition of imperialism based on force, and to substitute for it a new tradition of co-operation based on friendship. Yet her very first action in Asia brings her into conflict with the nationalistic forces which were stirred up—in part unwittingly—by the Japanese, and which she has bound herself by the Atlantic Charter to respect. Dr. Soekarno is being creditably restrained, even though he is unable to control many of his hot-headed followers; the next move must come from the Dutch. The statement of policy advanced early this month by the Dutch Government was rejected, as anybody could have prophesied. The correspondent of The Times remarked, with damning clarity, that "nearly all its provisions . . . represent either pious hopes . . . obvious statements of fact . . . or evasions of the issue." It made no advance on Queen Wilhelmina's proposals of 1942, which it was well known would be unacceptable to the Indonesians; and a great advance is needed. The Dutch cannot afford to comport themselves in this matter as a great imperialist nation. They must pocket their pride and make a real effort to reach a satisfactory compromise; and the British, in order to extricate themselves from an unhappy position, must use all their influence—which, since they are in military control of the area, is considerable—to prod the Dutch into doing so. Perhaps, the appeal of the Indonesians to America, Russia and China to intervene may bring a little more pressure to bear on The Hague. Indonesia has become the test-case for Asia, and the outcome of the present confused struggle will have no small effect upon public opinion in, for instance, Burma and India. If Great Britain is pushed into acting as armed bodyguard for the Dutch Empire, she will stir up trouble in her own. Holland must move, and move quickly; for the future peace of Asia is at stake.

The Bogy-man

"It would be a very serious thing for the country's external affairs if the Government were defeated in the by-election." The words are attributed in a report to Mr. Gerald Boland, Minister for Justice, speaking at the South Mayo Fianna Fail Convention at the week-end; but the sentiment has become familiar through its repetition in every election campaign of the past few years. Few propagandists, indeed, have had the hardihood to go as far as the prominent candidate who endeavoured to terrify a Dublin constituency with the aid of loud-speaker vans a couple of years ago. Their threats, as a rule, have been vague; but the import, plainly enough, has been that a defeat for Mr. de Valera or any of his nominees would be construed by other nations as a sign of disruption and weakness in Ireland, and would give them encouragement for some unexplained but terrible démarche. In other words, if the electors are not good boys the bogy-man will get them. False as it was at a time when some outside dangers undoubtedly did menace this country, the suggestion is utterly without excuse at present. It is, in fact, nothing more than a mean attempt to mobilise for the service of a political party that patriotism which brought men of all creeds and classes into the Defence Forces during the war. Mr. Boland knows, as well as we know, that in present circumstances his remark is something worse than misrepresentation. Recently the British people overthrew a whole Government, headed by a great war leader, without any diminution of its prestige or any danger to its position in the society of nations. Indeed, among those who think about such matters, there was a sincere admiration for a people which could give so excellent an example of democracy in practice and could prove itself one of the few that are politically mature enough to have overcome the Führerprinzip. Mr. Boland knows these facts. Why does he deliberately ignore them in order to catch votes? Is this the way that the new Ireland is to be taught to think and work as a democracy? We have a great respect for Mr. de Valera—greater, as we sometimes feel, than he has for himself. Are we to believe that he countenances this type of tactics in his lieutenants? It is shocking that a Minister of State should exploit the public confidence reposed in him by virtue of his high office for the sake of a paltry party victory at a by-election.

IRISH GAME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION MEETING

At a meeting of the Executive Committee and county representatives of the Irish Game Protection Association, held on Thursday, the Earl of Rosse (Chairman), presiding, resolutions of sympathy were passed on the deaths of Major T. Crosbie Goff and Colonel R. P. Wemyss-Quin.

It was decided to ask the Minister for Justice to receive an Association deputation regarding the better enforcement of the Game Laws. Prosecutions were ordered in several cases of reported offences.

It was proposed by Mr. T. Roberts Garvey, seconded by Mr. H. S. McClelland, and passed, that in future a general meeting of all members be held when recommendations are requested by the Minister for Justice as to prohibition orders or variation of dates.

It was agreed that quarterly committee meetings should be held on the first Thursday in January, April, July and October.

DUBLINERS FELLED STATUE IN 1767

The first statue erected in O'Connell street was one to General Sir William Blakeney, in 1759; eight years later it was overthrown, and never rebuilt, said Mrs. J. F. Daly, in the course of a paper entitled "O'Connell Bridge and its Environs," read at last night's meeting of the Old Dublin Society.

The lecturer told how, in 1864, the Corporation had prevented the project to run a railway viaduct diagonally across Westmoreland street at a height of about 20 feet above the pavement.

KING'S CHRISTMAS DAY BROADCAST

The King will broadcast, as usual, at 3 p.m. (4 p.m. Irish time) on Christmas Day, it was announced from Buckingham Palace yesterday.

NEW ZEALAND PIANIST AT R.D.S.

The soloist at the Royal Dublin Society's recitals yesterday was Colin Horsley. This young pianist, who was born in New Zealand, studied mainly in London, where he gained many distinctions. He is a competent player, with a fluent technique, but there was a lack of colour and variety in his playing as a whole.

The Liszt transcription of Bach's Organ Prelude and Fugue in A minor, with which he opened the evening recital, is a fine piece of craftsmanship. The fugue is one of Bach's greatest works, and, although its flowing and majestic style is eminently suited to the organ, Liszt contrives to transfer this to the piano without, as is the case in many similar works, intruding too much of his own personality. The fugue calls for a very fine left hand technique to deal with the flowing organ pedal work. I thought Mr. Horsley's interpretation too heavy and percussive, and lacking in the necessary smoothness and precision.

The second item was the Brahms-Handel Variations. Brahms has really a style quite his own, as regards variation form. From the cheerful Handel theme on which the variations are based we are taken through an amazingly wide circle of varied moods and emotions. The theme is left far behind, but never quite forgotten; no matter how far we go, we always feel an indefinable connection with it.

I did not like Mr. Horsley's playing of this work. The steady rhythm that underlies all Brahms's work was lost, and the style was more akin to Schumann. The loud passages were very forced, and in many cases, as, for instance, in the fugue, the playing was very laboured.

The Chopin Studies, Op. 25, which formed the last part of the recital, also suffered from this fault in the louder work. Chopin, of all composers, requires delicacy of touch and elegance of execution. I thought that the G Flat Study was about the best in the programme; here we had a quieter feeling, and the playing was free from violent effects.

The main work in the afternoon recital was the Franck "Prelude, Choral and Fugue." A Mozart sonata, Debussy's "Suite pour le Piano" and a group of lighter pieces completed the programme.

"THE BIGOTED LOUT"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I cannot claim to have fought on either side in what is euphemistically called the Spanish Civil War, and for my own peace of mind that is just as well. For had I done so, and had I killed anyone in the course of that fighting, my conscience would tell me that I, not being a Spaniard, had committed murder. But if my fighting had been done against Franco I should at least be able to salve my conscience by reminding myself that I had only supported a legitimate, constitutionally established government against a military mutiny directed against the best interests of the plain people of Spain.

Many of your correspondents overlook that very important point, and before I enlarge on it I should like to assure you, Mr. Editor, that I lived in Spain for several years, that I travelled extensively in both parts of Spain during the "war," that I speak Spanish fluently, and that my work in Spain brought me into contact with officers and men on both sides, with politicians and political agents on both sides, and with most of the international journalists who were trying to get at the truth on both sides.

When I first knew Spain the vast majority of its people suffered under a social system which was no more equitable than that obtaining in Ireland a hundred years ago. When King Alfonso abdicated I, in common with many others, believed that the plain people of Spain were at last to get something in the nature of a square deal. I was disappointed. The King had gone, but the forces of reaction remained. The new Republican Government were soon the victims of a jockeying for power by less disinterested groups. The brief period of hope was followed by the años negros (black years), liberal movements were crushed, and the Republic, in all but name, disappeared in a reactionary welter of killings and jailings and torturings that would have done credit to the Gestapo.

Then, in 1936, after a hard-fought election campaign, in which the Republicans and Socialists were badly handicapped by lack of funds and by the imprisonment or exile of many of their best men, a majority of the people of Spain reaffirmed courageous belief in a Republican, or "Popular Front," Government.

In a total of 473 elected representatives there were now 268 Popular Front candidates, against 140 Right Wing candidates. Of the former, there were only 15 Communists. The rest of the new Parliament was made up of Independents and members of various "centre" parties. And if your readers are interested in the actual policy of the new Popular Front Government, it can be briefly stated as the re-establishment of the Republican constitution, an amnesty for political prisoners, an agrarian reform based on the principle of land acquisition by compensation, the fostering of local industries, a vast plan of public works, and the creation of new schools for the education of the illiterates, who still represented one-third of the population.

With a few exceptions the spokesmen of the Catholic Church in Spain had, during the elections, given vocal support to the Right Wing parties. The Bishop of Barcelona had gone so far as to declare that a vote for the Right Wing was a vote for Christ. Others were content to tell their flocks that voting for the Popular Front candidates would be "a sin." But, in spite of high feelings, the elections were conducted peacefully enough to compel even the influential Vanguardia to admit of "their perfect discipline and normality," and to counsel national acceptance of "the people's will." The only shooting of which I have any certain knowledge was done by the Phalangists, a militant Fascist organisation, or S.S., who fired on a procession marching to the local jail to carry the news to the political prisoners.

It is undoubtedly true that the plain people of Spain saw their election victory as a triumph over both Fascism and Clericalism, and it is true that some of their subsequent actions were influenced by that interpretation of their victory. But whose fault was it? And if some of the forty thousand released victims of Right Wing aggression felt they had old scores to settle, whose fault was that?

The forces of reaction, however, did not wait for any of the happenings they were later to exaggerate into propaganda. On the very day following the declaration of the election results, and before the new Government had been formed, Gil Robles, the Right Wing leader, and certain redundant high-ranking army officers (who expected to lose their jobs) called on Portela Valladares, the defeated Prime Minister, and suggested the immediate establishment of a dictatorship, with himself as Dictator. The chief military advocate of this treason was a certain gentleman named Francisco Franco.

José Antonio Primo de Rivera, son of an earlier Spanish dictator, did not wait for the election. As leader of the Phalangists (or Spanish S.S.) he had left for Germany a couple of weeks before, and was now at the Kaiserhof, in Berlin, opening negotiations with the Nazis. The association with Mussolini's Fascists was already well established. The new Government of Spain was doomed before it was born.

To some extent the members of the new Government were themselves to blame for their failure. They betrayed an almost childish faith in democracy. They erred on the side of generosity in allowing disloyal Army officers to retain vital commands and in allowing political opponents openly to preach treason. And they failed at times to curb those of their own followers who were not so inclined towards generosity.

The real conflict began, however, with the murder, on July 12th, of the Republican Guards officer, Lieutenant del Castillo. This was followed by the "counter-murder" of the chief of the Monarchist Party, Calvo Sotelo. Six days later Franco arrived in Tetuan to head the open military mutiny of the Spanish Foreign Legion and the native levies of Morocco.

Sanjurjo, who had headed the anti-Republican rising in 1932, was equally the inspiration of this 1936 rising. But, though he was accidentally killed just about the time the trouble in North Africa started, there were enough of his supporters still in military commands in Spain to ensure co-operation with Franco.

The unfortunate soldiers who made up these commands were now faced with a simple choice of two alternatives. Either they obeyed the orders of their immediate commanders, or faced firing squads for "insubordination." Many of them actually did choose the latter course, and, though they remain unhonoured and unsung, those men were, I think, the real heroes of the Spanish conflict. On the other hand, the apparent relish with which Franco turned these "executions" into circuses for his followers, merits him the blackest of the many black marks which will some day be recorded against him. For the present, however, I only ask your readers to note that, while such Spaniards as fought on Franco's side were conscripts and illegally conscripted at that, the loyalist armies were almost exclusively composed of volunteers. At the same time, I willingly admit that there were idealists and materialists on both sides.

I formed no very high opinion of the fighting qualities of the Spaniards. With the possible exception of one crossing of the Ebro and the battle of Teruel, neither side showed any great tactical sense. I think one division of our present-day Irish Army could have taken on the whole Spanish Army. And I think that the Republicans would have triumphed easily over Franco's unwilling conscripts had it not been for Franco's outside help.

As some of your correspondents have pointed out, the outside help that Franco received in men was not of great value, but the thing which won the war for him was the overwhelming weight of material—aircraft, artillery, armoured fighting vehicles and ammunition—which he received from Germany and Italy.

One of your correspondents has indignantly denied that the Moors were black. He is right, of course; but what does it matter? The Japs are not black, either, but that does not make their methods of war or their treatment of prisoners any more acceptable to civilised peoples. And surely some of your correspondents, who claim to have followed events in Spain with so much zeal, will remember the notorious broadcast by Queipo de Llano, Franco's "Radio General"? As near as I can now translate it from memory, he said: "To-day we captured a bunch of milicianas. Our Moors will have great fun to-night." And, in case any of your readers do not remember the milicianas, they were the Cumann na mBan, or A.T.S., of the Republican Army. There is also no doubt whatever that, in many a Spanish village which dared to oppose Franco's progress, all the men-folk were murdered and the women-folk treated as "loot."

But what, some of your correspondents will ask, of the churches destroyed and the tens of thousands of priests and nuns massacred by "the Reds"? And to that I can well reply by saying that the Vatican authorities—who ought to know better than the atrocity-mongers—give the total clerical casualties for the whole Spanish war as either 360 or 630 (unfortunately, I do not remember which, but it included priests killed in action and in air raids). And if your Francophiles are not satisfied with that, perhaps they will recall how, after Franco's victory, thousands of these "massacred" priests celebrated Mass in thousands of the "completely destroyed" churches, and your Protestant readers may be interested to learn that their co-religionists in Spain were compelled to attend those Masses along with their Catholic neighbours.

I have no wish to prolong this correspondence by setting out unsavoury evidence in detail, but I cannot help being influenced by what I saw with my own eyes. And when I recall the tragic columns of half-starved Republican soldiers who were later to be sold into slavery to Germany, and the women and children I saw who had been maimed and disfigured or blinded in the "practice bombing attacks" of Franco's German and Italian friends, or when I recall at least one close friend who was drowned in the Mediterranean when his ship was torpedoed without warning (on behalf of Franco) by an Italian submarine, or when I remember the panic among Spanish girls caused by a mere rumour of the approach of Franco's Moors, I find it impossible to regard Franco as either a Christian or a gentleman.

I might conclude, Mr. Editor, by setting out a few very good reasons for believing that had Britain and France not allowed Franco to carry his treason to its successful end, there might have been no second world war. But this letter is already too long, and I will ask you only to accept as the opinion of one who has no axe to grind, but only an honest desire to know the truth, that Franco's desire for power and riches has been satisfied only at the expense of the many millions of Allied soldiers who now lie buried on the battlefields of half the world, to say nothing of the thousands of Spaniards who still rot in prisons which we were recently assured were "not quite as bad as Belsen."—Yours, etc.,

PETER DE LACY.

Dublin, November 9th, 1945.

LONDON LETTER

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON
MONDAY NIGHT.

THE United States Civil Aeronautics Administration, anticipating that 200 United States airliners will be operating over 170,000 miles of world airways within two years, plans to increase its foreign offices from the present three to six immediately, and to a total of sixteen next year. Offices are already operating at Rio de Janeiro, Lima and Panama, and the new offices are being opened this month at Stockholm, Lisbon and San Juan (Porto Rico). The offices will be staffed with a minimum of three technicians, one each for air carrier operations, maintenance and radio, and a clerk to ensure efficient service.

Cairo, Karachi, Manila, Hawaii, Paris, Buenos Aires, Natal, Tokyo, Santiago and Noumea (New Caledonia) are centres to which it is intended to extend foreign field coverage. There are also reports that an office may be opened in Eire. The offices are planned to implement measures for a tremendous increase in inter-continental traffic, on which lines approved by the Civil Aeronautics Administration are already operating thirty planes a day over a distance of 100,000 air miles.

The world-wide aviation facilities installed and operated by the U.S. Army Air Transport Command are to be made available in peace-time international air travel.

Dress Collection for Sale

The most famous collection of women's dresses ever made in these islands, equalled only by the world-famous collection at the Victoria and Albert Museum, has come into the market, because its owner, Dr. C. Willett Cunningham is retiring from his North London practice, and has no room to house it.

His earliest item is a dress of 1760, and his latest is a siren-suit with a pair of wooden-soled shoes. The collection includes over 550 undergarments, including bustles and many types of corset. It is likely to be acquired for permanent exhibition by the textile trade, and would be of immense value to theatrical designers and students of historical costume.

Lord Nelson's Pension

The decision of the Government to negotiate with the present Lord Nelson, who is over 80, with a view to commuting the annual pension of £5,000 a year, which has been paid to the family since Trafalgar, follows a precedent established in the 'eighties. Then, a Parliamentary Committee under Charles Bradlaugh's chairmanship succeeded in having a great number of perpetual bounties commuted by agreement at the rate of 26 years' purchase. Many of these had been granted in the time of Charles II. By 1925 only the Nelson and Rodney pensions remained on the Exchequer List, and in that year the Rodney file was closed at a cost of £42,000, 21 years' purchase.

Trainloads of Broccoli

Notwithstanding the enormous quantities of military stores which had to be conveyed and the tremendous amount of materials, foodstuffs and essential traffics to and from factories, the G.W.R. moved upwards of 62,000 tons of broccoli and cabbage from Cornwall growers to London during the past twelve months. This exceeded by 10,000 tons that conveyed in any previous season. More than 25,000 wagons made up 466 special trains.

Poyntz, Dromore, Co. Tyrone. The ceremony, with Nuptial Mass and Papal Blessing, was performed by the Rev. P. J. Gallagher, Maynooth. The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Cathal Poyntz. Miss Moya Poyntz, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mr. Harold Barry, brother of the groom, was best man.

AN IRISHMAN'S DIARY

Bronco-Buster

RAY BELL, sales manager of Louis B. (Metro-Goldwyn) Mayer's racing stable, who has come to Ireland to buy horses for a Hollywood syndicate, was at one time world's champion bucking bronco rider. He won the title in Madison Square Garden, New York, in the face of nation-wide competition.

Bell was born on a ranch in Wyoming. He became a cow-puncher. He says: "We'd hold local contests for roping and riding. Then there'd be contests between the different outfits. From there you worked up to the world's championship." In the year before he won the bronco-busting title, Bell headed all comers in the steer-roping championship.

As the world's champion bucking bronco rider he starred in a vast rodeo at Wembley Stadium, London. After that he went into the polo pony business. He says: "I could ride 'em good. I'd a place on Long Island where I'd play 'em and sell 'em."

From polo ponies he graduated to racing. After many successes in that delightful occupation he met Louis B. Mayer, and became a member of the Mayer racing organisation. He says: "Mayer won't bet. He won't have more than" — he wrestled with the exchange—"more than two and a half pounds on a horse."

International Tote

Bell, who long ago abandoned silver buckles and ten-gallon hats for sober blue business suits, has already bought five well-known Irish horses—War Again, Colomb's Kingdom, Low Signal, Mafosta and Bazooka. He may be going to buy more at the bloodstock sales, which begin to-day.

He would like to see racing become international. He says: "Don't tell me an Irish owner wouldn't want to put his horse in a plane for the States if he knew there was a 50,000 dollar purse waiting for him at Belmont Park."

Whatever may be the chances of Irish horses going to America, it seems that there are positively none of American horses coming here. The prize-money is on the small side. This, however, may be remedied when the Government decides to spend the money harvested by the 5 per cent. levy.

Bell expects to have his five Irish horses racing some time about next March, if he can ship them home fairly quickly. He has no idea yet what will happen; and it seems to me that the five Irish horses haven't either. Most American tracks are sand, and circular in shape. The local boys ride with the inside leather six inches longer than the other. They believe this helps them to keep the horse travelling smoothly on the bias.

I told Ray Bell that I mightn't mind having a go when the Irish horses were ready. But how is it to be done?

Bell has been at grips with the same problem himself. Before he left California he received reliable word from Dublin that Low Signal was about to win a race here. He tried to get a bet on, without success. Low Signal won.

What we need—or, rather, what you need, because I've given up—is an international tote.

Bet as You Eat

Speaking of an international tote, the Aly Khan has a perfectly blood-curdling idea for slipping a totalisator in between the soup and fish. I mean he wants to see tote machines installed in Dublin hotels and restaurants, on the same lines as the Pari-Mutuel in France.

At the moment, the only thing that stops people betting, who haven't been able to get a car to the races, is the difficulty of forcing their way through the crowds that bulge the walls of the booking-shops. It is impossible to picture what the tote turnover would be if the tote were to follow the customers, say, into the public-houses.

But what am I doing, chatting of betting and drink? You will pardon me while I go away and wash.

New Motorist

"It's obvious," said the new motorist, driving across the corner of the pavement, "that the chief danger on the roads is not going to come from the cyclist. The cyclist is too slow and light to do any serious damage. Oops!" He braked heavily, as the lights turned red. There was a light crash behind as a small boy on a carrier-tricycle rode into us, unable to stop.

"There is little to fear, furthermore," said the new motorist, drawing the carrier-tricycle along, tangled in our bumper, "from the pedestrian, who has become comparatively nimble in dodging the cyclists."

He wrenched the wheel suddenly, leaving an elderly man in a mackintosh transfixed. "The real danger will come from the people who have been tearing about the country with special licences—these doctors, clergymen, veterinary surgeons and lorry drivers. They've become so used to having a clear road that they will undoubtedly begin a mass murder of us unfortunates who have just begun to motor again. Look out!"

We came to a stop with our faces pressed against the windscreen, half-way out of the concealed turning. The terrified cleric, proceeding along the main road at twenty miles an hour, shot one look behind, and stood on the accelerator.

"See what I mean?" said the new motorist.

Military Secret

It's nice to know the reason for things, and now I know the reason for the apparently mad regulation that soldiers must always keep the top button of their overcoats buttoned, even if they can't breathe with the heat.

Once upon a time there was a high commanding officer, and he expressed the view that soldiers' overcoats were more comfortable, and looked better, if the collars were left open.

A higher commanding officer got to know of this dangerous heresy. He sent for the high commanding officer, and they argued the matter backwards and forwards for several days.

Then the higher commanding officer became angry. He said to the high commanding officer: "If you think that you can tell the soldiers how to wear their overcoats, I, the higher commanding officer, will now proceed to show you."

Soon afterwards soldiers were getting three days' C.B. all over the country for going about with their overcoat collars unbuttoned. The higher command had won; and some of the warmer blooded troops had a new reason for returning to civilian life as quickly as possible.

I mention this matter because it seems that what with poor pay, cumbersome uniforms, uncashable cheques and throttling overcoats, there will soon be only enough soldiers left in the Army to act as batmen for the remaining officers.

TRAINING OF YOUTH LEADERS

The first leader training course organised by the Youth Council of the Catholic Social Service Conference opened in the Marist Hall, Lower Leeson street, Dublin, on Sunday. Two hundred representatives of Catholic youth organisations of the diocese were present.

After the reading of the report of the Youth Council's activities since its establishment almost two years ago, a list of the aims of youth organisations was discussed.

The Archbishop of Dublin, Dr. McQuaid, who is President of the Youth Council, said that he wished to underline for them the necessity for setting before themselves, in their work for youth, a right aim, a high standard and a practical method.

Their primary aim, he said, was to conserve and to develop the life of sanctifying grace in souls; their standard then must be worthy of the aim to co-operate with their Divine Redeemer in the salvation of souls; and, because their standard was divine, their method must be practical.

"Into your work must go the best that experience can discover," he went on. "You are, indeed, apprentices, but ranged beside you are men and women rich in the counsel that is a fruit of grace and age and prayer. They will teach you to combine zeal for your own projects with charity towards the enterprise of others. And in this happy co-ordination of young with old one may see already the reward of your harmony in this federation and the promise of supernatural gain in the various fields of your endeavour."

LONDON TO HEAR WORK OF DUBLIN COMPOSER

The first Irish composer to have his recent work performed at a London concert hall since the end of the war is Mr. Brian Boydell, the Dublin musician and lecturer, who has just arrived in England.

The concert will take place to-day, under the auspices of the International Arts Guild, which has among its Committee members Mr. Benjamin Britten, Mr. Henry Moore and Mr. Stephen Spender.

Three works composed in Ireland during the war will be performed—the String Trio (Opus 21); "The Feather of Death," a song cycle for baritone (Opus 22), and the Sonata for Cello and Piano.

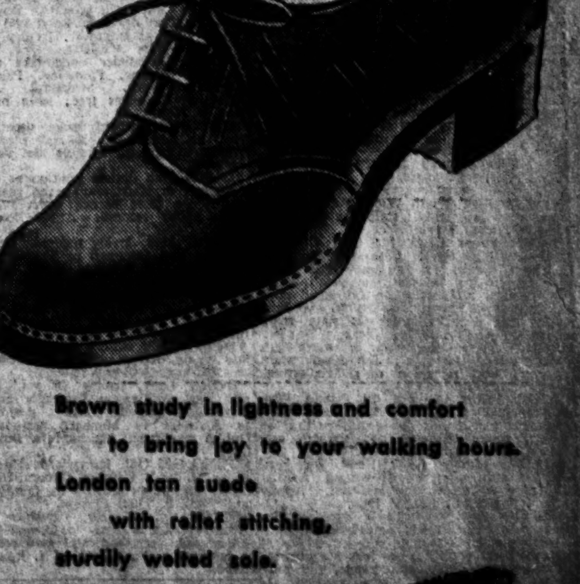

The instrumentalists will be the Mary Carter String Trio, with the Dublin artist, Estelle Wine, as solo pianist.

APPARATUS SOUGHT TO AID ENGINEERS

If the medical profession could provide apparatus for mass radiography which could X-ray people at 3d. a time, why could not some similar apparatus for hire be procured for the engineering industries, said Mr. R. O. Colman, speaking on "Technical Photography" to the Engineering and Scientific Association of Ireland in the Engineers' Hall, Dawson street, Dublin, yesterday evening. In their universities, said Mr. Colman, slides were used to a limited extent, but the use of the cine-projector had never been considered.

V.C. Heroes From Cork And Belfast

TWO Irishmen, an airman and a seaman, have been awarded the Victoria Cross in the latest list of awards for valour, published in last night's London Gazette.

They are Flight-Lt. David Samuel Anthony Lord, born in Cork 26 years ago, and Leading Seaman James Joseph Magennis, Ebor street, Donegall road, Belfast.

Flight-Lt. Lord, to whom the award was made posthumously, was the first member of R.A.F. Transport Command to win a V.C. Displaying "supreme valour and self-sacrifice" on the first airborne supply operation to Arnheim in September, 1944, he lost his life in the operation.

"By continuing his mission in a damaged, burning aircraft," adds the citations, "descending to drop the supplies accurately, returning to the dropping zone a second time, and finally remaining at the controls to give his crew a chance of escape, Flight-Lt. Lord displayed supreme valour and self-sacrifice."

Leading Seaman Magennis, of a midget submarine, was awarded the V.C. for an attack on the Japanese cruiser Takao in Johore Straits in July. When, with the submarine jammed tightly underneath the target, the hatch would not open fully, he squeezed his way out and prepared to fix limpet mines to the cruiser's hull. They would not hold, and it took him 45 minutes to complete his dangerous task. Throughout, he was handicapped by a constant leakage of oxygen from his breathing apparatus.

Of Leading Seaman Magennis, the citation states: "A lesser man would have been content to place a few limpets and then to return to the craft. Magennis, however, persisted until he had placed his full outfit before returning to the craft in an exhausted condition. Magennis displayed great courage and devotion to duty in complete disregard for his own safety."

Other V.C. awards announced were:—Lieut. Robert Hampton Gray, D.S.C., R.C.N.V.R., Nelson, British Columbia (posthumous); Lieut. Ian Edward Fraser, D.S.C., R.N.R., New Brighton, Cheshire, who was Leading Seaman Magennis's Commander in the midget submarine.

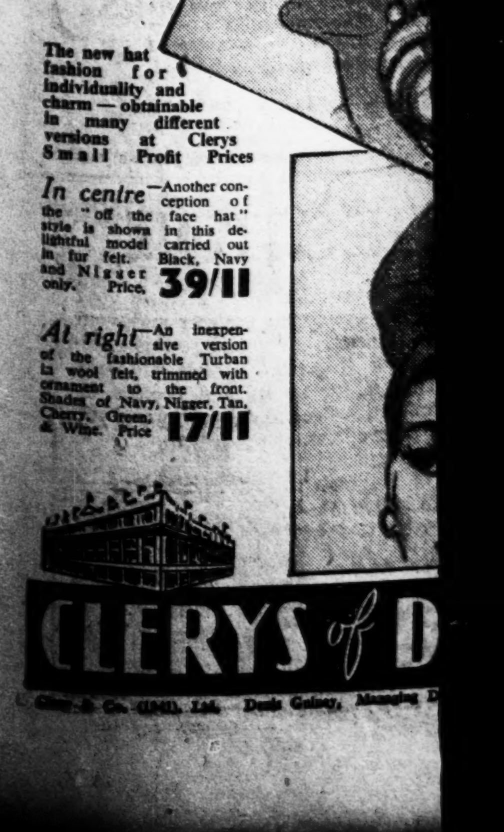

Allies Subdue Resistance in Surabaya

Indonesian resistance in Surabaya was crumbling last night as General Eric Mansergh's British and Indian troops continued their steady advance, after beating off small-scale Nationalist attacks with artillery and mortar fire, says Reuter. With the centre of Surabaya reduced to smoking ruins, R.A.F. planes yesterday attacked road blocks and Indonesian concentrations outside the city.

Some Japanese have been killed in the fighting, according to reliable reports quoted in an official British statement.

Attention in the Javanese capital yesterday was centred on the political scene, after the acceptance by Dr. I. R. Soekarno, President of the unrecognised Indonesian Republic, of the new Cabinet list submitted by Mr. Sutan Sharir, Chairman of the "Central National Committee." Mr. Sharir, who will hold the Portfolio of Foreign Affairs, together with the Premiership, announced earlier yesterday that his Committee would resign if his Cabinet list were not accepted. Dr. A. Sobardjo, Foreign Minister under Dr. Soekarno, had urged that the list be rejected.

More than 6,000 Dutch reinforcements are on their way to the Netherlands East Indies in two ships, one of which reached Singapore yesterday. British military authorities had not yet given permission for Dutch forces to land, according to the Netherlands News Agency.—(Reuter.)
